

Brian O'Lynn..

Brian O'Lynn was a gentleman born, he lived at a time when no clothing wa worn, As fashion walked out, of course Brian , walked in, I'll soon head the fashion,, said Brian O'Lynn,

~~Brian O'Lynn, had no breeches to wear, he gets an old sheepskin to make him a
With the fleshy side out, and the wooly side in, (pain;
They'll be pleasant and cool, say's Brian O'Lynn.~~

~~Brian O'Lynn had no shirt to his back, he went to his neighbor's and borrowed
Then he puckered the meal sack, in under his chin,, a sack,
Sure they'll take them for ruffles, say's Brian O'Lynn,,~~

~~Brian O'Lynn was hard up for a coat, so he borrowed the skin,
Of a neighboring goat, with the horns sticking out from his oxters and then,
Sure they'll take them for pistols, say's Brian O'Lynn,,~~

~~Brian O'Lynn had no hat to put on, so he got an old beaver, to make him a-one,
There was nothing for crown, and less for a brim, sure that's fine ventilati
s O'Lynn,~~

~~Brian O'Lynn had no bregues for his toes, He hepped in two crabshells,
To serve him for those, and he split up two oysters to match like a twin,
Sure they'll shine out like buckles, say's Brian O'Lynn,,~~

~~Brian O'Lynn had no watch to put on, so he scooped out a turnip, to make him a one, Then he put in a cricket, in under the skin,
Sure they'll think it is tickin, says Brian O'Lynn,~~

~~Brian O'Lynn, he his house had no door, he'd the sky for a roof, and the Bog
For a floor, He'd a way to jump out, and a way to swim in,
Tis a fine habitation, say's Brian O'Lynn,~~

~~Brian O'Lynn, went a courting one night, he set both the daughter, and mother
Fight,, To fight for his hand they both stripped to the skin,
I'll marry you both now, say's Brian O'Lynn.~~

~~Brian O'Lynn and his wife and wife's mother, they all lay down in the Bed together, The sheets they were lod, and the blankets were thin,
Lay close to the wall, say's Brian O'Lynn,~~

~~Brian O'Lynn and his wife and wife's mother, were all goin home o'er the brig
Together, The bridge fell down, and they all fell in,
We'll swim to the bottom, say's Brian O'Lynn..~~
